Dissention is cited in Fuller resignation

By Tom McPheeers
Sheila Fuller's surprise announcement that she won't seek a fourth term as president of the Bethlehem Central School Board has the effect of highlighting the divisions on the board, and in the community.

That apparently was one of Mrs. Fuller's intentions, but it doesn't mean that she is giving up, or getting off the board, she said Thursday.

"I do intend to run for reelection," she said. Her three-year term as a board member expires next June.

Prior to Wednesday's meeting, Mrs. Fuller said, all of the other members of the board had urged her privately to run for a fourth one-year term as president. She said she had indicated to all of them that she did not want to

Mrs. Fuller's statement

Barring an unexpected special meeting, tonight marks the last meeting of the third year that I have served as Board President. During the major part of those three years and of the five years as a Board member preceding my presidency, I have been confronted with a number of extremely difficult and unique problems. I believe that we have faced those problems and reached the best solutions through a mutually shared commitment to the best interests of the children and their education.

Of late however, I have become concerned that perhaps too many matters which should be secondary to the educational program available to our children are instead becoming the primary focus of our attention, and that concern weighs heavily on my mind. The Bethlehem School District has long and justifiably prided itself on not only the strength of its program, but also the cohesiveness of its neighborhoods.

New Clarksville water district is approved

By Patricia Mitchell

After responding to charges that the Weisenborn Farm may not be an adequate water supply, the New Scotland Town Board has approved a new Clarksville water district.

If all goes well, water could be flowing by late 1987 in the district.

Even though the boundaries of the district will stay the same, the board's action on a new district was required by the state Comptroller's Office because a source was found outside the hamlet, increasing the cost of the original project by $500,000. The original application made with the state in March, 1984, was based on finding a water source within the hamlet.

The new Clarksville district, at $1,815,500, will be funded with $1,315,500 from the federal Farmer's Home Administration (FmHA), a $400,000 department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) grant, and a $100,000 district loan. The FmHA money is divided into a $399,800 grant and a $375,700 loan. The HUD money will be used for the development of the Weisenborn Farm, and the year of the repayment period, the homeowner would be charged $45, and $65 for water use. The water use charge, based on 55,000 gallons used a year, would initially cost $1 for 1,000 gallons but this is expected to increase over time.

Ronald LaBerge, Jr., of LaBerge Engineering, said ad and a water supply with adequate flow and pressures.

"As far as cost wise to the homeowner, it is very good," LaBerge said.

On request from Paul Rubin, a resident of Clarkeville, a professional hydrogeologist and a member of the town's water committee, appeared before the public hearing and answered some of Rubin's charges. As reported June 4 in The Spotlight, Rubin has charged the Town Board of six letters, dating back to Sept. 20, 1983, that inadequate testing has been done to confirm that the Weisenborn Farm is a safe, reliable source of water for Clarkeville, and that other sites closer to the hamlet were not seriously considered.

For example, Rubin said the pumping test at the Weisenborn Farm was inadequate. He said a test pump, with at least two observation wells to check how quickly the aquifer can recover, are placed at the site and pumped for 72 hours as the water level is constantly monitored. The test at the Weisenborn site was pumped (Turn to page 5)
Farm owner fined
Dominick Cabellas of Oakwood Dr. in Glenmont, has been fined $125 in Bethlehem Town Court for the misdemeanor of criminal nuisance for allowing goats on his farm to escape through a hole in a fence, according to court officials.

The goats were wandering about on Oakwood Dr., and on some of the lawns on Drumheller Dr. on Tuesday, June 10. Police said the goats endangered the safety of vehicle traffic, and the health of pedestrians and local residents.

Bethlehem flags fly for Tricentennial

It's a tri-organizational project for Bethlehem's participation in the July 19 Tri-Centennial Parade in Albany. Award-winning Bethlehem Central High School art director Andrew Masino designed and directed the creation of the town's flags, which were paid for by the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce and hand made by candidates for St. Thomas's confirmation class.

Last March Consermod (confirmation service moderator) Maureen Cook approached Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Marty Cornelius: did she have any projects that could involve a group of teenagers? Cook was directing the class in a community service project as one of their first year requirements for their confirmation class at St. Thomas the Apostle Church.

Bethlehem, as Albany's "Companions throughout History," would be featuring antique cars donated by Bethlehem residents in the area-wide parade in July. Cornelius welcomed the students' help in making banners to display the height of the original town: Clarksville, Delmar, Elemsen, Glenmont and Slingerlands. The chamber would underwrite the expenses required for the display for the students. Andrew Masino designed the banners in the shape of the town seal.

8 injured in crash
Judy Newcomb, 17, of Voorheesville, was listed in fair condition Monday with severe head and chest injuries at Albany Medical Center Hospital after the car she was driving collided head on with another Saturday night in the Town of Berne.

Albany County Sheriff Sgt. John Mahan said Monday the collision is under investigation with possible charges pending.

The head-on crash injured eight people, one critically and a young boy about 9:30 p.m., Mahan said.

Newcomb's vehicle was traveling northbound on Knox Cave Rd., (County Route 252) near Simmons Rd., when it struck another vehicle traveling southbound, driven by Frank H. Rochester, 38, of Delanson.

The state Public Employees Relations Board has ordered Bethlehem’s Police Benevolent Association to formally enter into a proposed agreement with the town by Dec. 31, 1985, contract agreement.

The decision ends about two years of negotiations between the Bethlehem Town Board and the union, just in time to start a new round of negotiations before the current contract will expire Dec. 31. In the meantime, both sides appear to be ready to see the impasse that characterized the on-off, again—again struggle.

"They are 100 percent released," said Supervisor J. Robert Hendrick. He noted the union members are in line for some "good sized checks" for retroactive pay increases, and commended "the officers who I feel have done an excellent job during this period of time."

Matthew Clyne, attorney for the PBA, said on Tuesday it is his understanding the PBA will not seek to overturn the PERB decision or appeal it by the December, 1985, agreement.

"They have pretty much given up," Clyne said. Handing down last Wednesday, the PERB decision orders the Town of Bethlehem to withdraw its request to negotiate further with their contract of Town of Bethlehem. The PBA, the decision said, failed to negotiate in good faith with the town.

The dispute dates back to contract negotiations held last year after the last contract expired on Jan. 1, 1985. The town argued it had reached an agreement with the PBA president John Cox that did not involve a 20-year retirement clause, one of the union's major goals. But the agreement was voided by the membership, an act that made Cox voting against the contract, and the contract assued Cox of going back on his word.

The town was alleged to have forced a union without affirmative lobbying to support the ratification of the contract. Cox, according to him, must uphold the agreement unless he gives his consent for officers to negotiate to support the ratification of the contract agreement and it is not in the right to require the ratification.

The board's decision upholds a strategy of the PBA hearing officer findings in August. Clyne said the PBA decided to end its contract dispute with the town with the PERB decision because their only alternative would take too much time and would not be economically worth it. That alternative would have the PBA appear before a state Supreme Court judge to review the legality of the PERB decision. Clyne said a decision from the Supreme Court would not be handed down until late 1986. "They feel there is limits to how much they can get," Clyne said.

While the PBA still has a number of problems with the December, 1985, agreement, Clyne said it will expire at the end of the year.

The agreement calls for four pay raises of four percent in seven months, and also contains changes in disciplinary procedures for officers. It does not, however, include the 20-year retirement clause the union had made a cornerstone of its bargaining position.

Glenmont relocatables to be in place by fall

"We can go ahead," said a relieved Superintendent Lawrence Zinn.

After two tries and a "very nervous bid," the Bethlehem Central School Board last week finally got a bid for the Glenmont relocatables that was under the $203,000 ceiling authorized by district voters last March. The board, acting on the knowledge that quick action could mean an early return for Glenmont students, unanimously approved the $202,829 contract for Williams Mobile Offices Inc. of Baltimore, Md.

If Zinn's preliminary checks on the quality of the Williams product bear out, and if state approval can be obtained this week, the four new classrooms could be in service by October. That would allow the Glenmont first graders and kindergarten students who are now scheduled to start the year at Elsmere Elementary School to move back "home" much sooner than anticipated.

The relatively happy end to the crisis that had developed when the first bids came in last month was a further assurance made for a less fractious meeting than the several have been, but Glenmont residents, both on and off the board, continued to press for a more "permanent" solution to the overcrowding issue. "I'm very pleased," said Ellie Sharon, a Glenmont parent. "But this is only temporary." She and other parents pressed for a commitment from the board on a timetable for further action — a move the board, which made redistricting a major priority last year, only to see the idea shot down, resisted.

"We have not been sitting here blindfolded," said board President Sheila Fuller. Board member Barbara Coon, a Glenmont resident, suggested a review of census and enrollment data "after the dust settles in September," but even that idea wasn't universally popular.

Board member Marjory O'Brien said she wants time to assess how the relocatables fit in with the rest of the school, particularly in the impact of additional pupils on such core services as the cafeteria and the gym. And several board members, as well as Zinn, said they see the relocatables as a potentially permanent addition to the school.

However, Zinn again stressed the difficulty of making reliable population projections, as he has attempted to do for pupil growth in the Glenmont area. "The one professional demographic who has looked at my data has indicated that my projections are too high," he said. "The thing I really like about the relocatables is that they are indeed movable."

Several Glenmont parents tried to pin Zinn down on a precise date for occupancy of the new units. He said he couldn't do that, but noted that the company has 90 days to deliver, and will bring its own work crew to install the units. "I would guess it's going to be done within a week after delivery, but I really don't know," he said.

Two weeks earlier, the board had decided that Glenmont pupils currently attending kindergarten at the Elsmere Elementary School would remain at Elsmere Elementary School for their first grade next fall. Zinn said those first graders would return, as a class, to Glenmont when the relocatables are ready, although current plans would have forth and fifth graders use new rooms.

On the superintendent's recommendation, the board accepted all but two alternates on the Williams bid, for a roof overhang and for heating elements (to be supplied by the district) in order to keep the bid under the $203,000 approved. number of issues, from Gleemont overcharging to teacher "and administration salaries. In addition, the first informational election drive for the campaign was supported by the Bethlehem United Taxpayers Committee. Several meetings were held in the community over budgeting, student test scores and other issues. Split vote on the prop­osition was reported. The board, and there were two Wednesday night over salaries for admin­istration.

"Of late," Mrs. Fuller said in her prepared statement, "I have been concerned that perhaps too many matters which should be secondary to the educational program available to our children are instead becoming the primary focus of our attention, and that concern weighs heavily on my mind." Mrs. Fuller read the statement hurriedly, "I am not sure what the cause of the concern is but I don't feel comfortable about any other board member just as much as I don't feel comfortable about any other member of the board's factions. They're going to have to work meeting, June 4, indicated that a closed executive session went until 2:25 a.m. In the past, the board has negotiated three-year contracts with Zinn, beginning June 30, 1987, but that vote came only after another of the board's factions had not included a salary adjustment for the Superintendent. The minutes of the board's prior meeting, June 4, indicated that a closed executive session went until 2:25 a.m. In the past, the board has negotiated three-year contracts with Zinn.

and their common interests and concerns for the general good. For rea­sons I do not fully understand, I feel the latter elements are eroding. Issues related to zoning, buses, lower taxes, etc., are certainly important. But I have always been and should continue to believe the quality of the program. Disagreements as to approach are not only expected but important. But disagreement for the sake of disagreement is divisive and should be avoided at all costs. I am confident that we can, as a Board, and a school district, succeed in that avoidance. In saying that I do not mean to imply that I or anyone else can or should be all things to all people. I do want and expect, however, that we have made and will continue to make decisions with all people in mind.

That said, and despite the urgings of my fellow Board members, I have decided not to seek a fourth term as Board President. I am proud of my record in that position and I am even prouder of our accomplishments over the board during. I am immensely gratified that these accomplishments were not due to me alone but rather due to the Board members' ability to work together. It is my fervent hope that that mutual respect and appreciation continue.

Finally, I wish to sincerely thank the faculty and staff, the administrators, the Central Administration, the Board members, past and present, and most importantly, the community for their support and valuable input over the last three years. I can assure my successor that such means a great deal in performing the job.

Meanwhile, I look forward to working with the new President and my fellow Board members toward making the Bethlehem school district even better than it already is.

"With concerns of traffic safety and flow raised, the Bethlehem Planning Board adjourned a public hearing on a proposed subdivision to consider utilizing a right of way to widen Krumkill Rd."

The right of way would claim 25 feet on the development side of the center line of Krumkill Rd. in North Bethlehem to widen the road to ease traffic flow in the area if the subdivision is approved.

The proposed Indian Hills subdivision, with 125 single-family lots, is located between Krumkill and Russell roads, adjacent to the east side of the New York State Thruway. In a residential "A" district, the land is under contract to Belmont Builders of Mechanicville.

The planning board will have to announce a decision on the proposed development within 45 days of the Tuesday, June 17, hearing.

While the planning board wrestled with the proposed development's main road that travels "round and about the subdivision, residents of the area voiced concern that the already heavy-traveled area would become more congested.

"I do not like straight-through streets. They are causing problems every day of the week," Boutelle said.

A straight connecting street, Boutelle said, is not needed because Russell and Krumkill roads eventually meet, and the round and about way allows the main road to cross the ravine that cuts through the proposed development at the best possible place.

"Let's use the round and about way. It's a straight-through street, Boutelle said. "I don't think you want through traffic, and they want a solution to their traffic problems."

The board should determine if the development's roads should be used for through traffic or for residents, said board member Dennis Corrigan. "Give us (the development), I do not think you want through traffic," he said.

Most residents of the area said they did not oppose the development, but before it is approved, they said, they want a solution to the condition of Krumkill Rd. and to consider the additional traffic that would be added to the already heavy-traveled road. The residents also said they did not think a straight road was a good idea through the development.

In the area of the development, Krumkill Rd. is a 30-mile-an-hour road that is not consistently enforced, said Robert Berry, of Olympian Dr. and president of the Olympian Homeowners Assn.

"Over the past few years, traffic has been increasing unsatisfactorily," Berry said, with heaviest traffic occurring in the morning and evening rush hours. "The road is simply not wide enough to handle the traffic. We are asking you to consider widening the road."

If the road is widened and painted, and additional patrols are conducted by police, Berry said the development traffic may not be bearable.

"I think if everyone puts their minds together here, we can work out the traffic situation," said Dan Sampino, owner of several Marathon Lane subdivisions. "I am not opposed to the development."

On recommendation from the board's planning consultant Al Worth, the developer may submit another layout of the development to clean up some of the intersections and curves. Board member John LaFonte advised the audience at the hearing that the road layout may eventually change.

Even though the proposed Indian Hills subdivision outlines 125 lots, Boutelle said there may be fewer lots on the final plan because more detailed maps of the area are needed. The present lot sizes are 80 to 100 feet in width, and most lay south of the Niagara Mohawk power lines. A sanitary sewer system extends to the area, and a pump is needed for the proposed development's use. There is a water line along Krumkill Rd. and a pattern for storm sewers would lead to the ravine, but will be constructed in a way suppose to be environmentally friendly.

There are a sandy soil and the property mixed with some sand, Boutelle said.

About 10 hours will face Krumkill Rd. with a 45-foot total setback. Lots on the corner of Krumkill Rd. will have their development's side streets.

The planning board also adjourned a public hearing on the proposed Laurabruna Heights extension of Boylston Dr. without making a decision.

The project is located in a residential "AA" district, and surveyor Paul Hite said this will be the remaining section of the development, and will be located south of the Niagara Mohawk right-of-way and Sheffield Dr. The 24 lots will be consistent with other homes in the area. There are plans to connect sewer and water lines.

Hite said developer Rudolph Pratte, a partner of Paulus Lambert would like to continue Boylston Dr. through the right-of-way, and has already provided a neighboring property owner, with a proposal to subdivide his property into three lots.

Boylston Ave. could eventually be extended to connect with Elm Ave. East because Hite said there is a large tract of land between the development and Elm Ave. East.

Hite said he does not want to create a thoroughfare for increasing traffic problems.

On suggestion from Corrigan, Hite said the board would check into the possibility of using the County of Albany's water line right-of-way to save construction cost. It is possible to construct the water line to feed the development's streets.

The planning board will have to make a decision if the subdivision is not approved. The board will consider a decision if the subdivision is not approved.

The board will have to consider the additional traffic that would be added to the already heavy-traveled road. The residents also said they did not think a straight road was a good idea through the development.

Boylston Ave. could eventually be extended to connect with Elm Ave. East because Hite said there is a large tract of land between the development and Elm Ave. East.

Hite said he does not want to create a thoroughfare for increasing traffic problems.

On suggestion from Corrigan, Hite said the board would check into the possibility of using the County of Albany's water line right-of-way to save construction cost. It is possible to construct the water line to feed the development's streets.

About 10 hours will face Krumkill Rd. with a 45-foot total setback. Lots on the corner of Krumkill Rd. will have their development's side streets.

The planning board also adjourned a public hearing on the proposed Laurabruna Heights extension of Boylston Dr. without making a decision.

The project is located in a residential "AA" district, and surveyor Paul Hite said this will be the remaining section of the development, and will be located south of the Niagara Mohawk right-of-way and Sheffield Dr. The 24 lots will be consistent with other homes in the area. There are plans to connect sewer and water lines.

Hite said developer Rudolph Pratte, a partner of Paulus Lambert would like to continue Boylston Dr. through the right-of-way, and has already provided a neighboring property owner, with a proposal to subdivide his property into three lots.

Subdividing their regular meeting into two lots, the Bethlehem Planning Board made use of an extra 15 minutes between public hearings to finish some routine business.

At 7:45 at their Tuesday, June 17 meeting, after a public hearing on the proposed Lauraline Heights, the board approved minutes of two past meetings, approved a request from engineer Lindsay Boutelle to extend time to a public hearing for the Murray Hill subdivision, and is located in an agricultural-residential district, the proposed Carriage Hill development would be from Jericho Rd., but two other subdivisions on New Scotland Rd. to W. Paul McCarthy.

The board chairman John William­son gave the go-ahead to Boutelle to start the preliminary plans on the proposed Carriage Hill subdivision. Located in an agricultural-residential district, the subdivision may be deeded to the homeowner.

The board decided to table referring a site plan application on Booth Rd. to the Albany County Planning Board until a definite map of the plan can be drawn up. To be owned at the end of the summer by Dave Plummer, the proposed plans for the conversion of the first floor of two adjacent buildings into office space. Located next to Price-Greene, another building new contains one apartment on the first floor, and the access to two apartments on the first floor. Samuel Whitting, Delmar attorney representing Plummer, said the upstairs apartments in both buildings will remain.

As office spaces, 11 parking spaces will be needed for the 2500-square foot building under town zoning regulations, said town planning consultant Edward Kleinke, III. Two wheelchair ramps, also required, have been provided in the rear of the buildings. There are also two two-car garages on the property.

If the property eventually went retail, Kleinke said, he doesn't believe enough parking spaces are provided. If the property went retail making it a change of use, the owner would have to appear again before the planning board for approval, and the parking spaces would have to be addressed.

Williamson said he questioned the possibility of the property being divided and one building being sold off to go to retail space. The board decided to hold on any action until the tax maps can be checked on the possible division and the final plan is presented.

As the last order of business, the planning board set 8:30 p.m., Tuesday, July 1, for a public hearing on the Beaver Dam Estates subdivision on Beaver Dam Rd. Owned by Andrew Koonz, a three-lot subdivision with a 60-foot access-way to the larger back lot has already been approved by the board. Koonz is now requesting to take a small tract of land off the largest lot with plans to build a house there.

Williamson said as a conditional approval on the newest division the board may exclude further development in the largest lot unless Koonz appears again before the planning board. Also scheduled for the board's next meeting on Tuesday, July 1, is a public hearing on the proposed Quail Hollow 70-lot subdivision off Glenmont Rd. by Rudolph Paulsen, and Paulsen and Sons, Inc. of Albany at 7:30 p.m., and a public hearing on the proposed Jessica Park 15-lot subdivision in North Bethlehem by Kircher Realty at 8 p.m.

House damaged
About $725 in damages were sustained to a home on Oldox Rd. in Delmar over the weekend during a suspected break-in, Bethlehem police said.

Between 5 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday, police said, someone broke a garage window at the home and also attempted to force the front door of the home by kicking it in.

Unionville residents want water too

About 30 residents of Unionville made up the largest contingent at the New Scotland Town Board's public hearing on the creation of the Clarksville water district, fishing for answers on when they can have a water district.

The hamlet of Unionville is located about four miles northeast of Clarksville on Delaware Turnpike near the Bethlehem town line.

Clarksville joins the ranks of Peru Bush and Swift Rd., as a water district. Water is also provided to parts of New Salem, New Scotland, and Rt. 85 between Bethlehem's Vly Creek Reservoir and the town line through Bethlehem's water transmission lines.

Sharon Boebike, a resident of Unionville for 12 years, said the hamlet is the only one in the town that does not have a water district.

She said for the first four years she lived in Unionville, her well water was unusable. A pond was later dug on her property, and the new water was used for laundry.

"For the first four years, I lived my life in a laundromat," Boebike said.

Unionville is less than one and a half miles from the Weisenburn Farm, the water source for Clarksville, and Boebike asked the board why the hamlet could not be included in the district.

Town Supervisor Steve Wallace said the hamlet was not included with the original district plans submitted to the Farmer's Home Administration, a federal agency, picking up a large part of the tab for the district. Unionville may not be included now due to federal regulations, though the source is so close.

When making up the district, Wallace said, original plans were based on finding a source within Clarksville, and any piping to Unionville would have increased the cost of the project to an amount that would have been rejected by the state Comptroller's Office.

The average income in Unionville would have to be $12,500 to qualify the hamlet for a partial loan for a water district. A cost of $300 to $400 for each unit or user would earn a veto by the state.

Board Attorney Fred Reister said Clarksville will make it under the state's cost wire because there is a high density of users in the district, and the hamlet earned a large FmHA grant based on average income, with a loan repayment that is spread over a long period at a low interest rate.

"This board is really powerless to create a district," Reister said.

Wallace advised the residents to petition the town to conduct a water feasibility study of Unionville. The study will determine the number of users needed from a source to Unionville and the number of units compared to the final cost of the project. The study will cost the town $15,000, and if it comes up negative the project will stop there. If the cost to the user exceeds $500, Wallace said, the project could be dropped.

Wallace said the town is presently conducting a water feasibility study in the area of Normanskill Rd. The study may determine that there would be an excessive cost to users, and could be dropped, he said.

for 24 hours, and one observation well recovered a little water and one did not recover at all.

Rubin also said in his letters that the quality of the water must be checked for possible pollutants, and he said he was not aware if this was done.

In his letter, Phelan said, the Water well was pumped a rate of 60 gallons per minute and demonstrated a favorable degree of low water-level drawdown.

"While this test was not as definitive as the 72-hour pumping test method described by Mr. Rubin, the results do indicate a significant water-yielding capability for the water well," Phelan said.

"Most importantly, the results were sufficient to justify the water district project's viability to the FmHA, which is subsequently providing funding."

Phelan said a water quality test was conducted by Bender Hygienic Laboratory, and results indicate a potable water supply.

Finally, Rubin said, other sources of water closer to the hamlet were not considered that could cut down on the cost of the project. They include a glacial aquifer near Rock City Rd., linking together the individual Clarksville wells, constructing an Onequasshe aquaduct system with a dam built on the Onequasshe Creek and linking together with the Vly Creek Reservoir, tapping into the Vly Creek Reservoir, or enlarging the reservoir's dam and tapping into it.

Phelan said while Rock City Rd. is a glacial aquifer and is closer to Clarksville compared to the Weisenburn Farm, the farm could hold a deeper and larger deposit.

The Rock City Rd. aquifer, Phelan said, extends beneath the Vly Creek Reservoir system, and any pumping during dry periods would induce infiltration of reservoir waters into the aquifer.

There is no reasonable legal system for linking together individual Clarksville wells, Phelan said. Excessive pumping of water in the area would probably reduce the yield and the water quality of the source.

Constructing an aqueduct system, Phelan said, would require nearly twice the pipeline of the present district, construction in an area of limestone is an "engineering nightmare," and the water quality of the runoff may be poor.

The Vly Creek Reservoir is already stressed, Phelan said, and if the dam is enlarged there would be an increase in the amount of water entering the reservoir.

"The testing conducted to date has been somewhat limited in scope and it is clear that additional testing and a development of this aquifer is necessary. Now Phelan said while the cost has been granted for the Clarksville project, the town can proceed with these steps without creating an undue burden upon all the taxpayers of New Scotland," Phelan said.

It is hoped the water district could start using more water with the new district and there could be an increase in population, Wallace said. That may contribute to problems with the septic systems. He suggested that any residents who do have problems with their system file them before leaving the Onequasshe Creek.

Even though aerial photographs between the Weisenburn Farm and Clarksville have been taken to help determine the route of the pipeline, LaBerge said the route has still not been determined.

Papers to establish the water district with the new funding were expected to be filed on Thursday, the day after the public hearing, conducted by town's board attorney Fred Reister said.

After that, the town must wait out a 30-day referendum period for objections to the cost of the funding or the district. After 30 days with no objection, the comptroller will approve the creation of the district.

A water supply permit must be obtained from the Department of Environmental Conservation to allow the taking of water from one spot to another, Reister said. The county Health Department has to be satisfied the water is of good quality.

RCS contract dispute continues

After listening for an hour to the comments of teachers disappointed in the failure of the latest round of contract negotiations, the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Board of Education Monday night held a short executive session and decided to try again.

The board voted to request another meeting with the union negotiators as soon as possible. First, however, board members listened to the comments of teachers unhappy with the results of the June 12 negotiating session.

"After having our hopes raised at the news of negotiations getting back together last Thursday, we woke Friday morning under a pall of gloom and despair and bitterness," Norma Longo, a first grade teacher at A.W. Becker Elementary School, said. "What we were offered Thursday was nothing. War is hell. The battered and bruised bodies are never on only one side."

Longo went on to say that the worst results of this continuing situation that she could visualize would be teachers being forced to strike. The best, she said, would be that feelings and attitudes engendered now by teachers having to work without a contract would be around for years to come.

"Your victory cries will be hollow and will ring out like a funeral dirge over this community," she said. The main issues being discussed are higher salaries, the dental plan and elementary duties in the lunchroom and on the playground.

"From what I hear, not only have we not gone forward in negotiations, but we've regressed," Don Doyle, a high school teacher, said. "If so, I'm insulted. He said that the district has salaries that rate in the bottom third of salaries being paid to teachers across the state, and that the district cannot hope to attract young teachers coming out of college with such a low wage.

"Please, please, go back to the negotiation table and act in good faith," Doyle said to the board.

One teacher asked each board member to respond to his question of why someone with a masters degree would spend years working for free or on a shoestring budget.

"I don't look at playground duty as a second class part of the day," responded Anthony Williams, board president. He said children could benefit from being with teachers at all times of the day. "If that is inside, then it is inside. If that is outside, then it is outside," he added.

"Teachers should be in the lunchroom with the children," board member Marie Muller said. "Maybe you can teach them some table manners.

"We appreciate you and we love you," said board member Sara Hunter. "I believe the children can benefit from being with you, in the classroom."

A winning drawing was selected from each grade and incorporated into one single picture. The completed design includes the school play ground, books, a school bus, Little Red Riding Hood reading and Snoopy. The shirts were chosen in a special color for each grade, and that color will progress with the children as they advance to the next grade. Red was selected for 1st grade, navy for 2nd, maroon for 3rd, royal blue for 4th, Kelly green for 5th, black for Mr. Keating as principal, turquoise for the volunteer assistants, and raspberry for special education teachers, cafeteria and general staff.

Winners of the contest are: 1st grade, Amanda Krykowski, 2nd grade, Cara Leonard, Sarah Langan, 3rd grade, Chester Bolinger, 4th grade, Steven Jensen, 5th grade, Tara McKean. As winners, each student received their shirt free from the PTO.

• Real estate researchers project every year how much the average price of single family homes will rise. Average up, average down—what's really important is that you get top value for your home when you sell it. And the smart way to do it is to list a professional will f or you.

• It IS EASY to sell a house. To price a home properly, you need to know what comparable homes have brought in recent transactions and how their prices compare to the current cost of mortgage loans.

• Qualifying prospective buyers can list the top and sensitivity to find out what they really want, and the O'Halloran ask the right questions to determine what they can afford.

• Prospects are not simply shown a house—they're guided through it. Experienced salespeople know how to emphasize the best features in order to meet objections. They know how to negotiate on your behalf to get the best possible price.

Easier to tear down
Editor, The Spotlight:

As a parent whose children will be attending Bethlehem schools into the twenty-first century, I am writing to express my dismay at the campaigns disparaging our school system and people who run it. The latest of these is a petition to unseat the school superintendent.

What is disturbing in this attempt, as in the campaigns of the candidates in the recent school board election, is that it represents an assault against a fine school system, one that this community should be proud of. This is not to say that the system does not have its problems, as any school system does, and that the school board and staff have not made mistakes—but then all of us do. But problems and mistakes must be judged against the larger context of overall excellence. To recognize this context, one need only look at how others judge us—the Bethlehem school system is still a primary reason why people move into this area. And this fact means that all residents, whether parents or not, have a stake in the quality of the school system.

If the campaigns aimed at individuals succeed, they will not only remove persons who have had a large share of the responsibility for building and maintaining the excellence of our schools but they will also leave behind a legacy of bitterness that could divide this community for years to come. And if they succeed, we are likely to find that it is too easy to keep school system apart, but very hard to put it back together again.

The passing scene
Editor, The Spotlight:

I had been planning to write The Spotlight for quite some time, on several important but local issues, but kept letting affairs of state and tasks like watching baseball games interfere.

Now, however, the shocking news of Sheila Fuller’s resignation as president of the school board demands a response from the community. That it happened the same week as Warren Burger’s resignation from the Supreme Court may be of some significance.

What is going on in Delmar? This school board situation makes Monte Python look tame. It’s a wonder that we can get decent people to serve. And while we’re at it, why haven’t the tennis courts been resurfaced? I voted for that bond issue and want action.

The whole school board problem begins and ends with the issue of special programs for the “gifted.” Since that time, artificial insinuation has found its way into town to foster genetically improved students.

Let’s declare a truce and declare everybody in town, in the words of Garrison Keeler, “above average.”

Thank you, Mrs. Fuller, for giving your all and for a job well done. The “poor-potty” issue will all work out in the end. And, lest I forget, regards to Mr. Buford and may he enjoy his new career.

The other issues that I intended to write about are the art of making a left hand turn while driving. The Spotlight ads for flushing signs: and, Bernie Kaplowitz. In order:

• No one (or very few besides myself) makes a square left hand turn. Everyone takes the diagonal and scars the heck out of our cars waiting at that spot to proceed. Take notice and watch your fellow town residents making left hand turns.

• The Spotlight want ads have featured flushing directional signs for sale for several months (I read everything). Is this a code message for some secret society, or is someone really selling these things? Better yet, does anyone buy them?

• Third, and last, except in order of finish, I congratulate Bernie Kaplowitz for deciding to run for the New York State Assembly. Bernie has served our community well, is capable, balanced, mentally and physically alert, well above average and a wonderful, dedicated citizen, lawyer and father. He’s an all around “good guy” and I wish him the best in the primary.

They had a field day
Editor, The Spotlight:

We want to offer a special thank you to Hamagrael’s students, staff and parents for a wonderful Field Day on Friday, June 20. We were thrilled to be part of so much fun, spirit, friendliness and warmth. Joanne DelVecchio deserves real praise for organizing so efficiently, as always. We just love helping by being at each activity and with their kids. Special praise, however, goes to DelVecchio. No matter how well-organized a day is, if the participants aren’t cooperative it’s a wash. We want to offer a special thank you to DelVecchio.

I would like to thank some kind people of out town who helped me find my dog, Butters.

These people are the dog wardens, the police department and some of the citizens of the town in locating the area in which she was found.

Many thanks.

FISH folding
Editor, The Spotlight:

On behalf of the board of directors of Tri-Village FISH I would like to thank the residents of Bethlehem that as of June 30, FISH will no longer be in existence.

FISH has served the town since 1971, and the last few years have been a real struggle. In 1971 there were 3500 volunteers who handled 952 calls. In 1983, with 41 volunteers (25 drivers, 16 telephone people), we handled 981 calls.

Over the last 15 years, FISH has had 11,250 transportation calls alone, prepared numerous meals and made a great deal of visits to the area. It is the face of the town’s elderly who live alone. We have worked through the Times Union Christmas wish program and know that many of our older citizens who exist on a fixed income received a little extra help around the holidays.

Our volunteers, who are vastly overworked, continued to offer service with a smile—but the time has come to lose their burden.
