Bridge delays: whose fault?

By Mark Stuart

Although the death of a renowned Selkirk environmentalist was not the result of a delay in emergency response time due to the closure of the Jericho Bridge, the delay has renewed the question of who is responsible for the delays in repairing the bridge. Five days after the June 1 fire, took the life of Dr. Robert Brienow, Michael Fahey of South Bethlehem held a press conference on the steps of the Albany County Office Building in Albany to attack the policies of County Executive

James Coyne and the Albany County Legislature for ignoring the Jericho Bridge problem for three years.

"I'm here to appeal to what's left of Jim Coyne's conscience," Fahey said as he spoke to the media, which has displayed a renewed interest in Fahey's crusade since the fire.

Fahey used the media opportunity to appeal to county residents for support, saying "maybe your neighborhood is the one to be ignored this time of year." The bridge. However, Coyne has repeated his contention that the delay in repairing the bridge is due to Corrall's unwillingness to agree on a shared repair cost figure. He also has been highly critical of Fahey and Republican critics of the county's progress. "From day one, no one but Jim Coyne and Jim Coyne alone (has pushed this)," he said.

The discrepancy in accounts revolves around the question of how much Conrail's share of the repair costs will be, and whether the railroad is willing to increase its share if initial cost estimates prove to be wrong. Both sides agree to agree on is that Conrail is responsible under state law for repairing the framework of the bridge, while the county is responsible for the deck.

At Friday's press conference, Fahey produced two letters from Conrail, one dated Sept. 18, 1987, and addressed to Assemblyman

Did closed bridge make a difference?

Did it make a difference?

Last week’s fatal fire in Fevera Bush has prompted a debate about whether a closed Jericho Bridge cost a man his life and hampered attempts to douse the fire.

Michael Fahey, who has spearheaded the effort to get the bridge repaired and reopened after three years, went on the attack again after a Jan. 27 fire that killed Dr. Robert Rienow at the Rurick Rd. residence. The attack aimed at Albany County Executive James J. Coyne has prompted an investigation into the response of local fire companies to the scene.

Results of the investigation conducted by the county Fire Advisory Board are expected at the end of the week, said Mark Reuss, of Coyne’s office.

Firefighters on the scene said in their own words, an open Jericho Bridge would have made no difference in the attempts to save Rienow’s life, but might have made a significant difference in efforts to control the blaze.

Selkirk First Assistant Chief Dick Hummel said Monday that in his opinion Rienow was “dead before they pushed him out... the smoke was unbelievable.”

The first truck was on the scene in “four to five minutes,” he said. The first men on the scene pulled Rienow out and tried to revive him, but “there was nothing they could do.”

Craig Apple, third assistant chief of Selkirk Department Number Three, was the first to arrive on the scene. “The bridge had nothing to do with saving his life,” he said.

Apple, who arrived at the scene from home and did not have breathing gear, made two attempts to find Rienow and remove him from the home. Before being overcome by smoke, Apple directed another firefighter with breathing apparatus to Rienow.

Apple, a volunteer firefighter for three years and a county corrections officer, was given a citation of appreciation from Coyne and Sheriff George Infante last week for his heroic deed.

Apple said the building was fully involved when he arrived and that he was “scared to death” when he entered the house. He said he was proud about the citation, “but it was too bad I couldn’t have gotten there quicker and got him out.

Rural Rurick Rd. is located in the southwest corner of Bethlehem, near the hamlet of Fevera Bush but in the Selkirk Fire District.

The closest fire units are housed at the Selkirk Fire Company Number three in South Bethlehem, but the Bethlehem Ambulance Squad, which covers the same district, was housed that day in Glenmont.

The ambulance and backup units included from the Glenmont fire house, Selkirk number one, had to travel a longer route by way of Rte. 31 and Rte. 196 because the Jericho Bridge is closed.

Selkirk Fire Commissioner Charles Fritts said hours after the blaze was extinguished that an open Jericho Bridge would have reduced the response time for the Glenmont units. The quicker response time could have resulted in use of a hydrant on the north side of the bridge could have saved more of the home, he said.

The first units from South Bethlehem were on the scene within minutes, but Hummel said the additional 2,000 gallons of water carried on the two Glenmont-stationed pumpers would have made a difference if they could have arrived sooner.

He said the first attack on the fire is the most important to stop its spread. “Ten to 15 minutes makes a difference,” he said.

Reuss, citing several sources, including a hydrant at the Albany water filtration plant, where he claimed fire departments “have been known to turn the locks” to gain access.

Fritts said the hydrant at the bridge was used to refill fire trucks as was a hydrant near General Electric Fibrics, on the north side of the bridge. He said the filtration plant was only used once for a fire last year and that while the city did not have a problem with its use, it is not a standard operating procedure.

Hummel said portable pumps were put into the nearby pond once it was found in the dark and holes were cut through the ice. “It took time...once it was set up, we couldn’t have gotten there quicker...”

Who’s dragging their feet?

John Faso, and the other dated April 4, 1988, and addressed to county Public Works Commissioner Paul Cooney, in April 1988 Cooney letter to Rapp, which say that the $750,000 figure is the county’s estimate.

Coyne’s version is supported by Albany County Engineer Paul Cooney, who said Monday that the $750,000 estimate made by a consulting firm hired by Cooney said the firm arrived at that number by inspecting only one side of the bridge (the visible understructure). The county agreed that the $750,000 was a reasonable figure for the framework, Cooney said, but when the lawyers became involved in drafting a written agreement, differences arose.

Cooney said the problem arose out of who would pay for the supports under the roadway decking. The supports are currently hidden by the decking, Cooney said, and can only be properly repaired by replacement by tearing up the decking and inspecting it visually. He added that an estimate from a consulting firm... it was not a detailed inspection and that the county may still be double what they are offering now, Cooney said. He added that since the decking is in place a “Conrail can tear away the decking and inspect the supports.”

Asked about the discrepancy in accounts Monday, “A Conrail spokesman said that the company has met its legal obligations. The spokesman said negotiations with the county are “ongoing.”

“We call them every day,” Coyne said.

Since the closure of the Jericho Bridge, Fahey has taken on one consumer suit to convince the company, the Town of Bethlehem and Cooney to repair the bridge. The bridge was closed to traffic after a section of the deck fell.

Fahey spoke at a November legistaltive meeting to organize a community campaign against the county. “The community is just a phone call away from a legal battle,” he said.

When asked if he has the support of his South Bethlehem neighbors, Fahey said some of his neighbors has actively taken part in his campaign, but “none of them have called up to complain.”

Amidst all of the bad blood in this situation, Coyne said he is appreciative of the efforts of Selkirk Engineer John Hummel, who “has been very cooperative.”

BTR Realty's 140-acre Bethlehem Village Project in scale comparison with the surrounding roadways and hamlets

The Krumkill region study will be similar to the airport project in both time of completion and cost. Like the airport study, 80% of project costs would come from New York state, Bethlehem and Guilderland. That money will be turned over to developers by the leading agency, "buying into" the generic impact statement findings. After that, the state could use the money for a variety of things, including infrastructure projects.

The goals for a DEIS and a EIS are the same, Cooney stated, except that a DEIS is a regional study and a EIS is a smaller undertaking. Both processes are governed by the State Environmental Quality Impact Review Act, or SEQRA, law.

As is the case with most large scale studies, some sort of public hearing will be needed, according to Cooney. A public hearing for the 140-acre region would be required under SEQRA. It is not clear at this point exactly what area the Krumkill Rd region GEIS would include, or whether it would affect the proposed BTR Price Chopper project on New Scotland Rd, which does include an extension of the Slingerlands By pass, a recommendation of the county highway study. Currently, all three towns are interested in an effort to alleviate traffic congestion and improve decaying road conditions in the Krumkill Rd area. Cooney said that the town or county would not be charged for DEIS information in lieu of road construction costs.

Currently, the town of Guilderland is conducting a highway study in the area, which will run from Dr. Shaw Rd. to State Rte. 7 just north of Guilderland. The DEIS for the Southern Bypass project is underway, according to Guilderland. The Southern Bypass is designed to divert some highway traffic away from the Crossgates Mall congestion to a parallel southern roadway.

Bethlehem Commissioner of Public Works Bruce Secor said he is encouraged, looking at the issues of development and roads from a regional approach makes a lot of sense.

Secor said he spoke with Town Planner Jeff Lipnicki and that they both agreed that such a study could effectively facilitate the town's Master Plan process. "I spoke with Jeff about this the other day and we agree that the more information available, the better," Lipnicki said.

Lipnicki was unavailable for comment on Monday.

Return flight

If relatives have noticed that Richard G. Sullivan's head is in the clouds lately, they surely are not surprised. Sullivan, a former Delmar resident and Albany High School graduate, is looking forward to visiting the Delmar area — but not in the usual way.

Sullivan will pilot Delta Airlines' second inaugural flight between Atlanta and Albany tomorrow (Thursday). The 727 captain is expected to arrive at the Albany Airport with his wife Karen and son Ken around 2:30 p.m. His daughter Jacqui, who is attending the University of Arizona at Tempe, will not accompany him.

While Richard Sullivan was born in Poughkeepsie, he spent his childhood in Delmar. Sullivan knew he was destined for higher pursuits by the age of 11, when his older brother, John, took him on his first flight out of the Albany Airport. After earning a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering at Texas A & M University, Sullivan joined the U.S. Air Force. He served as a T33 pilot instructor at Williams Air Force Base in Arizona.

During the late 1960s Sullivan joined Delta Airlines and moved to Atlanta.

When he heard that Delta Airlines was starting a twice-daily run between Atlanta and Albany, Sullivan bid to fly the inaugural flight and won the right to pilot the second flight according to his son. Ken Sullivan said his father enjoys visiting friends in the Bethlehem area and staying with his mother, Marie Sullivan of Delmar, during August. "He's really proud of Delmar," said Ken Sullivan.

Richard Sullivan's sister, Peggy Sippel, resides in Voorheesville.

BTR Realty must now submit its revised proposal to the town by Feb. 20.

Although never officially presented to the board, the project was received with mixed reaction at a Nov. 2 meeting. Executives from BTR Realty and Price Chopper Supermarkets and the 500 area state office building committee, originally proposed to build a Price Chopper Supermarket on the 140-acre property. That original plan included an extension of the Slingerlands Bypass to connect with Southway Ave., a residential development consisting of 273 units, 290,500 square feet of retail space, 96,000 feet of transitional commercial space and 1,400 retail office space. The cost of extending the bypass was set at roughly $25.5 million.

The pre-construction base costs of the project was listed as upwards of $86 million.

How much of a virus is afflicting residents of our area as they face the obligation to spend millions of new dollars? How would the improvement of schools to serve their students adequately?

Can it prove to be catching? Residents of the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school district voted to reject a bond issue to provide an additional 28 elementaray level classrooms, roofing repairs, maintenance, and asbestos removal.

A positive vote for 28 additional classrooms, roofing repairs, maintenance, and asbestos removal is expected to cut down the number of students per class and provide a safer learning environment. However, residents are concerned about the cost of a new school facility that seems paramount in the decision-making:

regret is tinged with the acrid stench of culpability. All those who show a skepticism about the nature of the new dollars. (In this week's school board meeting, known objections. The residue of the debate will be heard. The outcome is still uncertain, and we will have an answer in the Voorheesville district that seems paramount in the decision-making:"

due repairs to the bridge must share in whatever responsibility exists in this case. The questionable local district school state aid formula penalizes some districts and benefits others. The state aid formula transfers costs of education to the property tax base, and the property tax is levied on real property. The local school districts need the $5.4 million in state aid for the upcoming academic year.

The Bethlehem Central School District receives, percent wise, the least amount of state aid compared to other suburban school districts. Bethlehem has received 19 percent, Burnt Hills 50 percent, Guildersleeve 35 percent, and South Colonie 59 percent.

Bethlehem taxpayers pay more than their fair share for education in New York State by receiving less state aid than the other suburban school districts. Bethlehem residents, who have been retired for several years, have seen their income decline 75 percent to 100 percent, yet receive no relief on a property tax that will not meet their needs.

The following summaries for selected years Bethlehem Central's total school budget, per pupil expenditures and the consumer price index, are:

Source: New York State Education Department and Capital Area School Development Association. * * * * *

The 89 percent increase in school district expenditures was lower than the 96 percent increase in the rate of inflation for this same period. During this period, however, we have experienced an 11 percent decline in enrollment.

The comparison of per-pupil expenditures for this same period shows a 12 percent increase compared to 96 percent in the Voorheesville district. A more recent (1986-1988) cost of comparison school budgets show a 17 percent increase compared to the increase in inflation of 7.2 percent. It appears that the salary contracts negotiated in 1986 account for the significant increase over the rate of inflation.

In the 1987-1988 school year over 50 percent of the Bethlehem's 231 full-time teachers made over $40,000 per year. Adding the 125 percent fringe benefits shows a total average expenditure per teacher to just over $50,000 per year for the year ending July 1989. The latest (1985-1986) contract provides for a cumulative teacher salary increase of 5 percent, while the 1986-1987 contract projected a 28 percent increase in the rate of inflation of 13 or 14 percent.

item's were not scheduled on a planned basis. Significant building repairs would be eligible for state aid in the next year or two, reflecting repayment of a $400,000 loan borrowed many years ago for funding a new teachers salary contract.

Pieced on 1987-1988 enrollment, the average annual per-pupil cost of financing the $11.6 million bond issue, including interest, will average over the next 20 years about $3000 per year. This is an affordable cost. Our debt service, based on per pupil cost, will increase from one of the lowest in the suburban council to one of the highest.

A needless hazard

Could an intact, usable Jeri Bridge have made it possible for firefighters and rescue crews to have saved some parts of the Adirondack Park intact, preventing fire fighting efforts may never been known. But just as the first wisps of smoke can reveal a blaze, so the whiff of suspicion lingers.

To the extent that this is possible, the bitter feeling of regret is tinged with the acid stench of culpability. All those persons, both in official position and in quasi-public agencies, who have flubbed on funding the long-overdue repairs to the bridge must share in whatever responsibility exists in this case.

Even more important, however, is the necessity to hold their noses to the mess and require action instead of excuses. So long as the present dangerous situation is allowed to prevail, the peril remains that other innocent persons will needlessly, improperly be put in jeopardy.

If one of those popularity polls could be taken among those in this area, the voting result very likely would show a 50-50 split in two divergent points of view.

In one group there would be all those individuals who are happy to have open roads (and largely salt-free), fewer hazards of ice and snow, improved road transport, safer walking, less shoveling — as well as whatever additional benefits there may be in a snowless winter.

The other group would include, certainly, winter sports enthusiasts who are easily depressed by each glance out of the window. They would find the Jeri Bridge closed makes those long-awaited weeks before the environmentalists, gardeners, and others prone to fret about the prospects for crops, lawns, ornamental plants, and the look for a parched landscape is indeed, a worrisome thing.

Thursday's traditional time for the groundhog to emerge, and either see his shadow or not, presumably will be longed for weeks ahead in the remainder of winter. But shadow or no, it's probably pretty safe to forecast that the Winter of 89 will, in the end, gather in its due share of snowfall. Then skiers and gardeners alike will smile, and all the rest of us will take comfort in our temporary reprieve.

The Bethlehem Central Board of Education recommends voter approval to eliminate such health hazards. A responsible government agency should evaluate the asbestos problem, identity the risks and order and schedule the removal of all asbestos hazards in our schools.

An additional $3.5 million in the $11.6 million bond issue is for roofing, boiler replacement and other maintenance. When voters approved the bond issue, Bethlehem school administrators were told that some three years later, that $640,000 must be spent for asbestos removal. It should not be lost sight of that large number of administrators, the board of education, and the voters approved to eliminate such health hazards. A responsible government agency should evaluate the asbestos problem, identity the risks and order and schedule the removal of all asbestos hazards in our schools.

Bethlehem school administrators also said that the $4.6 million repairs for deferred for inclusion in bond issue were to be used as that signal.

Our future has been writ

That’s no fake of timeliness. When John F. Kennedy was born, there were even more Presidents to remember. Insofar as the presidency is often accepted as a kind of natural resource of profile, much of the history of the past six decades has been written in the character and actions of our leaders, the goals of men who were beginning to take the streets of the mainstreets when President Bush was born. Our destiny had, after all, long before now.

The 51st President is alive and well—somewhere!

We tend to think of our on-going history in terms of couples, short bursts of developments. But true history and our future are written in much longer stanzas, or perhaps cantos. Only four days of the 51st President, the 51st is somewhere in the United States, staying at the White House, and all in between. When Mr. Bush was born, Harry Truman was a hale and hearty old man who had just resigned Richard Nixon home to his hardworking ma, and Ronald Reagan was trying to find the cash to put himself through college.

And that youngster who poured our coffee in the diner just the other day—who, she may be the 48th. Who knows? If you, you may be harboring a future President in your own home (so please be respectful!)

As Mr. Bush came in, Ronald Reagan became our fourth living ex-President joining Nixon, Carter, and Ford, and yes, these in their own extraordinary, but to have as many as four former Chief Executives of the United States isn’t quite rare in the nation’s past.

I believe that it has happened and that Mr. Bush is on hand and each occasion was quite brief. According to the way I figure it, the President is in residence for about a year in 1825-26 (Adams, Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe). In 1945, Jackson, J.Q. Adams, Van Buren, and Tyler were all alive for a short period after President Polk was inaugurated. Then in 1861, the all-time record six Presidents for about a year in 1861.

In later times, assassinations and other untimely deaths all but precluded having on hand a number of elder statesmen. For 20 years, Herbert Hoover was the only living former President, as one example. So Mr. Bush possesses an unusual opportunity to seek advice from men who have been there before. We wish him and (them) well.

Much-needed capital improvements can remedy many health and safety concerns

In making the decisions to expand three elementary schools and build five new classrooms, each school board considered the most economically feasible construction alternative, affirming the present grade-level configurations, and continued the neighborhood school concept. Since the bonds were passed, the bond orders are the only capital expansion, at the elementary and junior high school levels, and the construction and alterations to the district will make the last interest payment on the bonds during year two. In contemplating the 20-year average increase of $3,94 in Bethlehem and $649 in New South Wales per thousand of assessed value, to keep pace with the growth of the tax base, the school district will invest in the education and safety concerns— including fire safety, and athletic fields—will yield the space necessary to adequately provide for the projected student population. Interior alterations to all five schools and five new classrooms will provide the district with student-focused classrooms, andcontinue the district would make the first interest payment on the bonds during year two.

The bond issue referendum represents a big day for BC. Like you, the bond issue will bring much-needed capital improvements, many of which address health and safety concerns. The bond issue, which always comes out in the final issues, is a reminder of the continuity of a presidential inauguration, I got to be there! When John F. for professional growth, particularly for our younger teachers. The future negotiated contracts should be affordable and equitable. The overall needs of the students and of taxpayers, as well as the teachers, must be considered.

In the last few years Bethlehem school budgets have increased at a rate greater than the increase in the rate of inflation, largely due to significant salary increases. Needed maintenance items have not been included in annual budgets on a planned basis. As a result, we can expect rapidly increasing costs in the next few years.

We have seen declining voter turnout at annual school board elections with increasing voter apathy. A defeat of an annual school budget has little effect in elementary level students. The complexity of running a school district in today's world. Drugs or asbestos, for example, were not parts of the suburban child's experience when we went to school. Amongst these immediate concerns it is easy to lose sight of the real mission of a school district. It is to prepare our most precious resource, our children, for their future careers and lives. The responsibility is significant, but is reflected in the experience of each individual child. Maybe it is best appreciated at the level of an individual family.

When we moved to the Capital District six years ago, finding a community with a first-rate school system was our foremost concern. We were anxious to provide our daughters, aged five and three, with an excellent education right from the start. Our oldest daughter, Laura, is now a fifth-grader and her sister, Claire, a third-grader. My husband and I are sure that the fine education that our daughters are receiving will provide them with an excellent foundation for their futures. However, over the past six years, we have recognized the negative impact that increases in enrollment have had on our schools. We have been very impressed with the many creative ways BC principals and teachers have met the challenges presented by the lack of adequate classroom space. In spite of their efforts, many fine educational programs have been compromised.

As our three-year-old daughter, Joanne, approaches school age, we have some serious concerns about her future education. She will not be able to attend kindergarten at our neighborhood school the way her sisters did. Indications are that BC enrollment will continue to increase. If nothing is done, more compromises in the quality of our daughters' educations can be expected. The Bethlehem Central Board of Education has presented us with a responsible plan to maintain our district schools, both educationally and physically. Bethlehem's continued commitment to providing a first-rate education directly depends upon the passage of the proposed $11.6 million bond issue.

More support voiced for BC bond issue

Editor, The Spotlight: I am writing to express the support of the Bethlehem Central Middle School PTA for the BC district bond issue.

As parents of middle-school students, most of us do not have children who will enjoy the proposed new and improved facilities in the elementary schools. Our support for the issue is based instead on our belief that: first, the plan for expenditures from the bond issue is sensible and rational and will help assure a quality educational environment throughout the district; second, adequate facilities are essential to maintaining the quality education which has attracted many people to town and served as a major factor in our property values; and third, we recognize that public education is a cornerstone of our American way of life and that the quality of life of our community is directly related to the quality of that education.

Bethlehem is in the throes of a Catch 22. On the one hand the town enjoys a school district with an excellent reputation which, along with other factors, makes Bethlehem a most desirable place to live. On the other hand the community’s attractiveness has led to tremendous population growth and many related changes, perhaps not always well planned, which can threaten some of our town’s assets including our quality schools.

By the end of the next decade there will be an additional 670 students in the district, a growth of 17.5 percent. The district’s facilities are already strained; a vote to any of the grade schools to visit any of the grade schools would convince anyone of this. Perhaps not always well planned, the environment in which to provide the quality of our schools draws her applause from parents, educators of this school district, the teachers and students need the applause as well as the time and assistance to Hollyhock Hollow members of the Selkirk Fire Department, and all the other many town residents for hundreds of town residents for hours. But to everyone who spent their time and money for construction of 31 acres of mature and successional lands fire departments are used to capacity on weekends and state standards and the tennis courts are used to capacity.

The Delmar and town park pool complex is below the final performance; the students who made the sets and put together and guided the sound and lights (and were taking it all down with a bit of sadness at 12:30 at night after the last performance, the time spent on improvisation, giving the play something fresh in each production; six productions; students who came to watch their friends (and saw Shakespeare); parents who contributed support in countless ways, and students and teachers in after-school seminars to discuss the play.

This was a fine educational experience--it included so many dedicated, supportive, and interested people. Some devoting a few hours, some months and many hours. But to everyone who spent time being part of it, especially Mrs. Yeasts and Mr. Neher and the students, thanks for allowing us to be a small part of something really exciting. Congratulations and best wishes on your tour.

Thanks to firemen and ambulance crew

Editor, The Spotlight:

I wish to thank very much the members of the Selkirk Fire Department, the Bethlehem balance, and all the other many individuals who came to render assistance to Hollyhock Hollow Farm and my late uncle, Robert Hendrick.

A very special thank-you to Craig Apple, third assistant chief, I appreciate so much the very fact that he and the other firemen and volunteers were there.

The following facts also should be known:

Right now, the library is used to capacity on weekends and its 90 parking spaces are inadequate. Expansion has been discussed.

Right now, the size of the town park pool complex is below standards and the tennis courts are used to capacity.

Right now, the police department would like to hire more officers. The town and firelands fire departments are recruiting for additional volunteers.

Price Chopper: There is another development, however, which will also begin to make an impact on our town. "Delmar Village." Like "Bethlehem Village," is proposed to contain a segment of highway which will link the Delmar Village and Main Road via Van Dyke Road and Fisher Boulevard.

From testimony and documents submitted by the developers (and available in the reference section of the library), we learn this project of 232 apartments and 56 single-family homes will have the following impacts on our town:

It will add over 750 people to our current population of 26,000.

It will add approximately 130 school-age children.

It will cut the town over $25,000 and may result in a tax increase.

It will add over 2,000 car trips per day to the town. That is a small number of something really exciting.

Approximately 50 percent of this traffic will travel on Orchard Street, a road that is almost exclusively by a sizeable number of town residents for bicycling, jogging, and walking.

The proposed highway system will funnel commuters from outlying towns through Bethlehem. (The town board is originally intended to bypass Bethlehem.)

It will alter or destroy 72 acres of mature and successional forest and displace many species of wildlife.

The following facts also should be known:

Right now, the library is used to capacity on weekdays and its 90 parking spaces are inadequate. Expansion has been discussed.

Right now, the size of the town park pool complex is below standards and the tennis courts are used to capacity.

Right now, the police department would like to hire more officers. The town and firelands fire departments are recruiting for additional volunteers.

Planning will hold a special informational meeting to discuss the impacts of this project on Monday, Feb. 6, at 7 p.m. in the board room of the library.

We urge all residents to attend our informational meeting and the public hearing, and to write to Supervisor Hendrick. Under SEQRA Law, all questions must be answered, all appropriate concerns addressed. This project will put a major highway through prime woodlands in a beautiful part of town. We must speak out now to help protect and preserve our disappearing resources and keep Bethlehem special!

Matters of Opinion

Why Slingerlands doesn't want development

Editor, The Spotlight:
The Slingerlands Homeowners Association would like to respond to several issues which have been raised in these pages in recent weeks. Our opposition to the BTR Realty commercial/residential development has been directed toward the proposed project and has focused on fundamental issues regarding the effects that this complex would have on our community. We have described in earlier correspondence and reports the negative impact this project would have on traffic, environmental quality, town services, and the residential character of our community. The association has, from the outset, scrupulously avoided divisive tactics. We have never directed our criticism toward residents of the town with differing opinions. We have also never suggested that this complex be located in another part of town.

Vox Pop
or adopted any other "not in my back yard but yours" position.

Officers of the association have met with many Bethlehem residents in the last few weeks, and it is clear that the issue of commercial encroachment into residential areas is one that concerns many people in all parts of the town. The association would oppose the location of this project in any other area of the town if that area were zoned residential and if there were significant opposition from the residents of the area.

The issue with the most wide-ranging implications is the precedent that would be set by rezoning for commercial use an area which is presently zoned residential A and AA, the most restrictive residential zoning. The section of New Scotland Road in question is not a mixed commercial/residential area destined for more commercial growth any more than is the area around Verstündig's Florist, Bennett's Sporting Goods, and the gas stations on the corner of Elm and Delaware Avenues. All the land encompassed by the BTR proposal is residentially zoned and most of the parcel was, in fact, upgraded to residential AA in 1976. The few small businesses nearby have been business locations for over 40 years and have been grandfathered in. These parcels would revert to residential use if they were not used for commercial purposes for more than one year. The beautiful forested areas on both sides of New Scotland Road are prime residential locations well suited for the kind of quality development seen in Surrey Mall, Colonial Acres, and Deerfield. Another issue which has been raised in recent weeks is the supposed tax advantage of bringing a major, new development into town. While this advantage seems axiomatic to most people, it is common knowledge among experts in the field that such projects are inevitably expensive to the municipalities in which they are located. This has been dramatically illustrated by recent events in the Town of Guilderland. That town attempted to implement an impact fee on new developments to compensate for additional town services made necessary by these developments but not covered by the additional tax revenues they generate. However, the legality of this impact fee is being questioned in the courts. This week we are submitting to the town a 15-page analysis which identifies significant flaws in the financial impact statement contained in BTR's proposal. The net effect of the BTR development could easily be an increased tax burden on the residents of Bethlehem.

While many residents agree that it is not in the best interest of our town to approve the construction of the major shopping complex proposed by BTR Realty, some have suggested that town residents should support a scaled-down version of this project. In the lengthy proposal submitted to the town by BTR, the developer indicated that this complex is designed as a four-phase development. It is a common tactic of developers who are unable to secure approval for a major development to propose their project one piece at a time. This is a likely scenario in this case. At a Dec. 15 meeting of the Bethlehem Democratic Committee, the developer stated that it initially considered approaching this project on a piecemeal basis, but decided to present the proposal in its complete form. While we appreciate the candor, the developer has indicated in various meetings and published remarks that it is not interested in building a small supermarket center. If a scaled-down proposal were put forth at this time, the developer would merely be reverting to the piecemeal tactic they initially considered.

It would be very difficult to allow BTR to build a shopping center on this site and then prevent further expansion of the project. If a shopping center of any size were built on New Scotland Road—the adjacent land now zoned residential AA would become very unattractive for...
Residents opposed to shopping center plan

Editor, The Spotlight,

We are sending this letter to you to express our concern with the regional shopping complex proposed by Realty One, Inc. As Bethlehem residents, we are opposed to this project because of the adverse impact that it will have on our community.

We hope that you will oppose this proposal as well and present it to you for your consideration.

'Chicken Little' yarn inspires more ideas

Editor, The Spotlight:

As long as The Spotlight is spinning yarns and telling tales ('The Sky is falling!' Jan. 25), perhaps it could include the one they about the emperor. He's the man who paraded through town, promoters and conmen. It turned out that, in the end, it was all a ruse. He had nothing to admire, nothing at all. And most of the people were duped. Perhaps this is the social comment of the story.

And then there are the ones about wolves—a wolf in sheep's clothing, a wolf having and puffing to blow houses down, and a wolf dressed as a kindly granny and carrying a basket of "goodies" on his arm, to entice. Perhaps there are some morals to be learned from these tales, too.

The Spotlight has made clear its position in the matter of commercial development within the town and is entitled to differ in opinion and perceptions from many of its readers. But its readers have a right to expect that its editorialists will analyze the town's needs, its resources, and that editorialists will provide food for thought, not a diagnosis and a prescribed treatment of bedtime stories of nursery rhyme "morality" and mentality.

Reader is critical of an editorial

Editor, The Spotlight:

As a concerned citizen, I was truly disappointed, and more than a little disturbed, by the spirited, derogatory editorial. The sky is falling!

I am proud to know many of the people who contributed great amounts of talent, time, and effort to warn "the king" of the disaster looming over the town of Bethlehem in the form of the BTE megaproposal. (A wolf in sheep's clothing, to further The Spotlight's children's story theme.) This proposal, as well as other ill-conceived development projects, is proof, in my opinion, that commercial encroachment into the undeveloped land in the town is entitled to differ in opinion and perceptions from many of its readers. But its readers have a right to expect that its editorialists will analyze the town's needs, its resources, and that editorialists will provide food for thought, not a diagnosis and a prescribed treatment of bedtime stories of nursery rhyme "morality" and mentality.

Nancy Niederer

The Spotlight's attempt, in the following editorial, to "clarify" a previous editorial and at the same time to unfairly accuse Mr. Lipnicky of "misconstruing" that most people would agree were the clear wishes of a majority of that earlier editorial, further detracts from the quality of the Spotlight's editorials. The Sky is falling! I hope we see editorials in the future which are more fair, less critical, and more constructive, rather than disruptive influences in the community.

Town reviews safety of roadway

By Mark Stuart

A Bethlehem Town Board public hearing last Wednesday to discuss parking regulations along Adams St., became a little more involved than originally expected when residents began to address the overall safety problem within the vicinity of the only railroad crossing in the town.

The hearing was set to discuss erecting No Stopping Or Standing signs on Adams St. between Kenwood Ave. and Hudson Ave., but was inconclusively transformed into a discussion of overall safety along the relatively narrow strip of road. Concern over Delaware and Hudson Railroad crossing lights not functioning, the lack of sidewalks, late night parties at auto shops and vehicles kept in violation of the zoning ordinance were also discussed.

Building Inspector John Flanigan showed the board a 4½ minute videotape to illustrate the problem of vehicles parked along the west side of the street and the resulting lack of space for traffic. Currently, there is no parking allowed on the west side of the street, but signs are posted only near the Kenwood Ave. end. Flanigan explained that cars and delivery vans are frequently parked or stopped along either side of the road, affecting the safe flow of traffic and limiting sight distance for motorists exiting adjacent parking lots.

He added that adequate parking is available at the municipal parking lot next to the Spotlight building or the Peter Harris building on Kenwood Ave.

A major underlying issue is that Hudson Ave. and Adams St. have become a thoroughfare for heavy traffic avoiding the Four Corners intersection. As a result of that condition, pedestrian safety was addressed. One member of the audience said children who attend the Bethlehem Central Middle School must walk to school along Adams St., which has no sidewalk between Hudson and Kenwood avenues. In addition, Flanigan said, there are no lines indicating the edge of the road. He added that the town plans to paint new lines when the weather permits.

During the meeting several other parties raised issues of conditions that exist near the D and H Railroad crossing. Flanigan said that the crossing lights sometimes malfunction and that work crews had cut back trees and brush along the tracks but left the dead brush lying around. One woman complained that employees of a nearby repair shop have parties at night that often spill over into the street. Another resident complained that the fallen debris and piles of dirt along the road have affected neighborhood real estate values.

Although the courts raised not directly related to the issue of the no parking signs, the board patiently entertained the comments.

In other business, the board:

- Unanimously approved a request to name the stretch of County Rt. 55 between Rt. 9W and Rt. 32 Creebe Rd. Councilmen Robert Burns and Sue Ann Ritchko met with Selkirk residents who suggested the name for the Creebe family, early Dutch settlers in the town. Burns and Ritchko said they had also met with South Bethlehem residents to discuss names for the road, and both groups had voiced their support for naming roads after historic families in the town instead of after trees and flowers.

- Approved a traffic amendment to install stop signs at the intersections of Peet St. and University Drive and Sherbrook St. and University Drive in Emn Estates. The board decision was a result of a Jan. 11 public hearing in which no one spoke for or against the proposed sign.

- In four separate motions, approval was given to go to bid for motor oil, printing of the Bethlehem Report, police uniforms and three new police cars.

- Approved a request to reject a previous bid for water purification chemicals and reopen bids on Feb. 1.

Delmar teen arrested at teen drinking party

Bethlehem police broke up a teen drinking party on Friday night and arrested one youth for disorderly conduct.

Police said the drinking party at a home on Union Ave. in Slingerlands was attended by 150 to 200 youths. Police said the youths were advised to leave due to the fact alcohol was being consumed by underage teens. The teen who lives at the house told police her mother was in Florida, police said.

The arrest was made when a 16-year-old Delmar youth became argumentative and hostile when officers asked him to leave, police said.

Chamber seminar focuses on choices

By Sal Privitera Jr.

When he is conducting his empowerment workshop in various locations across the nation, William A. Powell says he can help individuals identify choices and improve their ability for achievement.

Powell, who will conduct a seminar sponsored by the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce on Feb. 9, said the program was developed because as a counselor he had "often worked with people who felt they did not have choices in life." "Realized it's not just people in counseling, but also healthy people who are faced with situations (where) they don't find choices as readily," he said. The situations could include staying in a relationship "because they don't feel they have a choice."

The empowerment seminar is designed to show individuals how to identify their own strengths, weaknesses and potential as well as how to develop productive relationships at work or home. Other goals of the seminar include understanding individual management styles, self-motivation, motivation of others and improving communications techniques.

Powell, who holds a master's degree in counseling and guidance as well as a specialized certification in Neuro-Linguistic Hypnotherapy, said the seminar accomplishes its goals through helping the individual identify their personal blocks to having choices and how the blocks have accumulated during the person's life. Exercises on mentally letting go of situations and significant emotional events, creating emotions to "empower us" to go forward," and being effective in "forced relationships (such as with co-workers)," are also part of the seminar, Powell said.

"When people leave, they feel armed and dangerous," Powell said. Effective communication, based on the MLP communication process, is an important part of Powell's seminar. He said he conducts exercises in deep structure communication, a communication form requiring the persons involved in the communication to question what is being said until the true meaning of a statement is derived.

"There's nothing magical in what I do. It is not a guru relationship... you are empowered to make choices or understand why you didn't make a choice," Powell said.

Powell has conducted the seminars for two years for a number of organizations such as Xerox and for teachers in the Orlando, Fla. and Washington, D.C., public school systems. He also holds a bachelor's degree in education, a master's in science and has taken additional training including the New York Training Institute for Neuro-Linguistic Programming.

The task force is co-sponsored by the state University at Albany and the Nelson A. Rockefeller Institute for Government. The group's purpose is to produce a report offering practical and comprehensive information on how school districts can better meet the educational needs of children.

THE YOUTH NETWORK

Bethlehem Safe Homes Network

What is the Bethlehem safe homes network?

The Bethlehem Safe Homes Network is a way that adults can join together to help provide a safe environment for their community's children. It does not require a commitment of time or extra effort for already busy families. It is a simply a public agreement between us to follow some principles that will provide a general safer community for our young people. These principles are:

1. In my home, I will not serve or knowingly allow the use of alcohol by guests under age 21, nor will I knowingly allow the use of illegal drugs by anyone.

2. I will provide adult supervision at teenage parties in my home.

Our young people are faced almost daily with pressure to use alcohol and illegal drugs. As if the over glamorized advertising of alcohol were not enough, there are endless social messages and pressures to use all kinds of substances. Even those children who choose not to use are frequently forced to socialize with those who are using, if they are to be social at all.

No responsible and informed adult today can deny that the use of alcohol and illegal drugs pose a real and unacceptable danger for our teens. Yet, as individuals, we frequently feel helpless to protect a "Young Adult" in the midst of finding the way of solving this problem. Voorheesville is currently instituting a Safe Homes Program. How will the Safe Homes Network begin?

In the next few months you will hear more about the Safe Homes Network. Two-part agreements will be distributed to all residents, including school students, other newcomers to the area, and students from organizations, etc. You should read the agreement carefully, sign it, and send the copy to the address thereon. The agreement-singing campaign will culminate in a "Safe Homes Week," April 3-9, 1989, with agreements being distributed to all three homes of Voorheesville on April 9, last April 9, early May. It will compile a directory of those people signing the agreement and willing to be in the directory. The directory will then be distributed to all those names are in it.

If you are interested in receiving an agreement form now or if you have any questions, please call the Library, 451 Delaware Ave., Delmar, 7 p.m. Information, 439-3822.

Bear friends honored

To culminate a week of Teddy Bear songs, poems, stories and activities, Mrs. Kendich’s pre-first class at Ravena Elementary School held a Teddy Bear picnic, complete with “bear” snacks and Teddy Bear guests. While picknicking, the students were surprised when a knock on the door brought a special delivery letter from the Three Bears.

School selected for pilot

Peter R. Coymans Elementary School has been selected by the State Department of Education to serve as a pilot in the second phase of a congruence project. The project was designed to provide better coordination of programs intended to improve academic performance for students who need reading remediation.

Louise Nuccio and Joanne Chase, both remedial teachers, will work with classroom teachers in planning and implementing teaching strategies to boost reading skills. As the program develops, it will focus on staff flexibility, a commitment to an integrated reading/language arts program, and a planned approach to sharing information concerning students, according to Nancy Anfress, director of special programs and instructional services.

Town Building Inspector John Flanagan and Supervisor J. Robert Hendrick praised the first place entry in the Capital DistrictT-2400

RCS overcrowding in the district school will be “aggravated” by future development, he said. “All they’ve done is delayed the day of reckoning.”

Sengenberger found the “apparent apathy appalling,” noting that only 11 percent of the people eligible to vote turned out to vote.

The board will look at some short-term solutions, including moving the kindergarten classes in separate incidents this week.

An 18-year-old Ravena man was arrested early Sunday morning for DWI on Rt. 9W after he was stopped for a faulty tail light. He was also charged with criminal possession of stolen property, resisting arrest, unlawful possession of marijuana and unlicensed operation of a vehicle, police said.

A 23-year-old Glenmont woman was arrested for DWI on Rt. 9W near Rt. 32 early Sunday morning after she was stopped for failure to keep right, police said. She was charged after she failed prescribed device and field sobriety tests, police said.

Inspection shows repeat violations

By Sad Priveder Jr.- The Voorheesville Central School District received its annual fire inspection and was cited for violating several violations and offering a reminder of violations from last year’s report.

The inspections, required annually by the State Education Department, were conducted by New Scotland Building Inspector Paul Cantin and Voorheesville Building Inspector Jerry Gordinier.

The inspectors found the elementary school cafeteria doors do not swing in the path of egress and lack panic hardware, some emergency escape windows are inadequate and exit doors are chained at night. These items also were found to be non-conforming during the 1987-88 school year inspection and will be addressed by the district in its proposed facilities bond issue or by the 1989-90 operating budget.

Other violations at the elementary school include unused ducts between two class rooms that are not closed off, lack of a telephone that can be used by anyone during an emergency, combustible items stored near the boiler room exit, storage of combustibles at the bus garage in a room that does not have a one-hour fire rating.

Additionally, the district has to provide proof that the windows in the building have the proper glazing, proof that a written procedure for the evacuation of the building is posted and certification that the stage curtains are fire resistant.

Lenten services scheduled

- On Ash Wednesday, Feb. 8, area churches will hold services together in the high school auditorium. St. Matthew’s Lutheran Church, 75 Whitehall Rd., Albany, will hold a service at 7 p.m. with the theme, “Come Home to Jesus.” During the remaining weekday evenings of Lent, St. Matthew’s will offer a series of meditations at 7 p.m., followed by Bible study at 8 p.m.
- The Jerusalem Reformed Church, Feura Bush, will hold noon services on Wednesdays of the Lenten season.

Asbestos removal

The management plan written by the Professional Services Industries, Inc. (PSI) was unanimously approved by the board and will now be filed with the State Education Department. It calls for an asbestos coordinator, Gene Grasso, to begin by July 9, 1989, and be completed by June 30, 1990.

In a letter to the district, Joe Conroy of PSI told Superintendent Louise Gonan, “Professional Services Industries, Inc. highly recommends that the spray-on (asbestos-containing) surfacing material be removed as soon as funds become available.”

Conroy said the asbestos found at the elementary school checked a given response rank of three (significantly damaged friable surfacing asbestos containing material) and that the district had more time to handle the problem because of the low potential for contact, vibration, air erosion and disturbance.

The junior-high school had a response rank of one (damaged or significantly damaged) and one response rank of two (thermal damage) due to the high potential for contamination, air erosion and disturbance.

Many of the ceilings in the building have spray-on asbestos surfacing on concrete material, which has been damaged by staff.

“I therefore choose our opinion that the high school has a higher priority than the elementary school,” Conroy said. The recommendation resulted in the high school work being declared a contingency for this summer.

PSI found 12 areas of the high school to be significantly damaged and 36 areas “damaged with the potential for significant damage.”

Conroy said the company recommended removal of asbestos from all of the areas.

An initial response program will be recommended for the air sampling test of the 42 areas; all were found to be below the action level of 1.0 fibers per cubic centimeter of air set by OSHA. The EPA standards were 1.0 fibers per cubic centimeter set under AHERA were exceeded by 29 of the identified areas, Conroy said.

Asbestos removal work stems from a state and federally mandated Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act (AHERA), which calls for a management plan to conduct asbestos testing and develop a management plan for handling the carcinogenic material found.

The district has set dates for two informational meetings on the proposed bond issue. Meetings will be held Feb. 27 at the elementary and high school. The work proposed for both buildings will be discussed at both meetings.

Asbestos management plan. “We feel this management plan (Education Department) says remove asbestos expeditiously,” Board member Salvatore Salvagno said.

“The contingent amount may increase to include fire code compliance violation found in the 1988-89 report given to the board last Wednesday,” (See results). All of the contingent work is included in the $8.9 million 20-mill bond issue the district will put before voters on a tentative date of April 13. During the meeting, auditor Steven Scriber raised the possibility of presenting the bond issue to the public as a number of proposals rather than as a single issue.

The board discussed the possibility briefly, but made no decision.

Board member John McKenna called the impact of the contingent items on the taxes assessed for a single year’s operating budget “dramatic,” while Board member David Teuten said the impact would be "unbelievable."

Meanwhile, the district has released its preliminary budget proposal for 1989-90 in the first draft stage. The $7.6 million total is an increase from last year’s annual operating budget of $7.4 million.

The district’s auditor and architect to let the polyvinyl chloride (PVC) solutions stored near the boiler room exit, area churches will hold a service at 7 p.m., followed by Bible study at 8 p.m.

Asbestos removal

The management plan written by Professional Services Industries, Inc. (PSI) was unanimously approved by the board and will now be filed with the State Education Department. It calls for an asbestos coordinator, Gene Grasso, to begin by July 9, 1989, and be completed by June 30, 1990.

In a letter to the district, Joe Conroy of PSI told Superintendent Louise Gonan, “Professional Services Industries, Inc. highly recommends that the spray-on (asbestos-containing) surfacing material be removed as soon as funds become available.”

Conroy said the asbestos found at the elementary school checked a given response rank of three (significantly damaged friable surfacing asbestos containing material) and that the district had more time to handle the problem because of the low potential for contact, vibration, air erosion and disturbance.

The junior-high school had a response rank of one (damaged or significantly damaged) and one response rank of two (thermal damage) due to the high potential for contamination, air erosion and disturbance.

Many of the ceilings in the building have spray-on asbestos surfacing on concrete material, which has been damaged by staff.

“I therefore choose our opinion that the high school has a higher priority than the elementary school,” Conroy said. The recommendation resulted in the high school work being declared a contingency for this summer.

PSI found 12 areas of the high school to be significantly damaged and 36 areas “damaged with the potential for significant damage.”

Conroy said the company recommended removal of asbestos from all of the areas.

An initial response program will be recommended for the air sampling test of the 42 areas; all were found to be below the action level of 1.0 fibers per cubic centimeter of air set by OSHA. The EPA standards were 1.0 fibers per cubic centimeter set under AHERA were exceeded by 29 of the identified areas, Conroy said.

Asbestos removal work stems from a state and federally mandated Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act (AHERA), which calls for a management plan to conduct asbestos testing and develop a management plan for handling the carcinogenic material found.

The district has set dates for two informational meetings on the proposed bond issue. Meetings will be held Feb. 27 at the elementary and high school. The work proposed for both buildings will be discussed at both meetings.

Heldervale residents voice concerns

By Cathi Anne M. Cameron

Residents of the Heldervale and Mason Lane area turned out in force last Tuesday night to tell the New Scotland Planning Board that the perception that "a majority of the families in our neighborhood are not concerned about Heldervale IV" was definitely "incorrect."

According to a letter the residents presented the board, "The owners of Heldervale IV property have every right to develop this land so long as the impact of the development does not infringe on the rights of others. Several key issues brought up by citizens concerning this subdivision have not, in our opinion, been adequately addressed by the town planning board."

The issues concerning the area residents are drainage, traffic and the proposed use of Transvap sewer systems in the 17 houses that would make up Heldervale IV.

Representing the developer, Ken Johnson of Standard Engineering later said that he thought his presentation to the board "generally went pretty decently." Johnson explained that while he did not know all of the background behind the water systems in the area, he felt "positive" about what response he would receive from the Department of Health on the Transvap systems, and that once that was resolved, there would be no further problems. "Most of the people there were there about drainage and other problems," Johnson said. "They weren't opposed to the subdivision itself." Johnson also noted that "we are putting in grinder pump systems, in case Bethlehem or New Scotland will let us use into their sewer system. But so far they've said no."

"If they are putting in sewer hookup, that's the proof right there that they know the Transvap is going to work," said Jean Hlope, a longtime resident of the area.

"I've been through everything in the 45 years I've lived here," Hlope said. "When we moved here, there was still a one-room schoolhouse. We didn't even have school buses. I had to try to get a sewer district. I even had to pay to have my whole basement dug up, my expense, to have the sewer hooked up. No provisions have been made for the run-off, the sludge, when those systems go into place. That already happened to us here seven years ago. We were forced to put in grinder systems, and then they tell Liviano (the developer) he can put in transvaps!"

Hlope told the board that "she would not recommend to my worst enemy to buy that property," and told the developer, seated in the audience. "I'm trying to do you a favor." Hlope said that she thought that the board was "slightly more receptive to the residents' views" that they had been, and "perhaps we can be encouraged."

Jay Bloomfield, a Westover Rd resident, was not as encouraged. "The planning board doesn't seem to look at these things in a town-wide perspective," he said. "They don't see how this will be several years down the line," said Bloomfield, one of four responsible for the letter and 52-signature petition presented to the board.

"Bloomfield did not levy all the blame on the town of New Scotland. "We are at the whims of two towns. It doesn't make much sense. Bloomfield is considering all of the units involved in the Price Chopper development, but it won't include 17 more houses."

Bloomfield also voiced concern over what he sees as the unenforced decisions of the Albany County Department of Health, to whom the planning board sends many items for review. "They seem to be beyond the voters and the planning board's reach," Bloomfield said. Bloomfield said that "they should continue to push for the (sewer) district. My major concern is sacking land owners with waste water management because the system continues to flow and fail. Once you have a system in, it is very hard to change it." He added that, "I am deheartened. I'm almost resigned to it being approved."

"Planning Board Chairman Robert Hampton made it clear to the full house that "the health department has no authority to require a central system in this case, and the developer has been required to put in dry sewers for future development."

In other matters, the planning board:

- Unanimously approved a site plan doubling the size of the Camp Firehouse dining room to a capacity of 360.
- Reviewed a site plan by architect Jim Holtz for FJE Enterprises Home Center to be located on the former Mayfair school site. The existing building will be torn down after construction. Owner Frank Mesiti requested that the board approve a change for the existing building to be moved to 200 feet to obtain Bethlehem water, explaining that Bethesda has said it would provide the hook-up if the town recommended the footage. The board requested final contours and drainage plans be sent to C.T. Male, the town's planning consultant, for review before final approval.
- Reviewed a request by John Diviney on behalf of Norman and Donna Lynn Warrells seeking a change of occupancy but continuing retail business for the former Cape Cod Fence Company site. The Warrells plan to operate a craft and sewing goods store on the site. The board specified that the site plan approval would be contingent on driveway curb, parking, and landscaping plans. Diviney said the seller would remove all swimming pools, fill, grade and clean the property before the closing date at the end of February. Building Inspector Paul Cantlin will review the site and let the client are delighted you are making improvements," Hampston added.

- Discussed a subdivision proposal by James Coffin for Rt. 85, entering New Salem. The board requested a long form report under the State Environ-mental Quality Review Act (SEQRA) before any further consideration.

- Reviewed the response of developer Robert Mitchell to an Environmental Assessment Form, for his proposed Fpinnsale subdivision on Pondside Hill Rd. The board will not take further action until water, sewer and drainage information had been reviewed by C.T. Male.

Group home sites: finding a better way

By Cathi Anne M. Cameron

"There is a tremendous need out there. People do not have a negative attitude, so we will just have to educate them."

Supervisor Herbert Reilly was speaking about his ecumenical and developmentally delayed, and the education he hopes to provide to New Scotland residents at his recently appointed Site Selection Committee.

The Committee, which held its first meeting last Wednesday night, includes John Reese of Fingerlunds, Ed Lukomski of Voorheesville, Nancy Phelan of Clarksville and Dorothy Sacco of Voorheesville.

"Just thought it was something could do for my community," said Nancy Phelan. "And since we're in the community, we've an idea of sale signs and locations. If we can come to the board informed, and talk to the nearest in the localities, we can make things much more digestible for the community.

Phelan added that the committee was not restricted to any particular site, and that the proposed site on East Rd. had been rejected by the community.

"For last time the state came in and said 'here it is, you have 40 days to tell us why not. We want to have it to make them see why instead.'"

Ed Lukomski, executive director of the Adirondack Regional Children's Advocacy Center of Albany, thought that the meeting was "very unique. New York is in the only area that I know of that doesn't have a residential program in the county. Altoona, Glens Falls, Albany, Bethel all have programs. I'm here for the board to make them see why instead."

Lukomski said it will be very important to provide enough information so that the existing "we welcome these, but not to us" sentiment can be changed. There are many studies that say no property values are affected. Because of our annual funding and state inspections, we are often the best precedent to argue on the block. Once we move in, people tend to forget we are there.

"In a residential program with a NIMBY (Not In My Back Yard) syndrome who are the ones with the handicap," Lukomski added.

Wednesday night, the committee saw a videotaped presentation from the Oswald D. Eck, Jr./Eleanor Roosevelt Developmentally Disabled Services Office titled Right at Home. Right in the Neighborhood. Ed Solomon, director of program development for the office, who will present a similar program at the Four Roads Neighborhood Association Wednesday (tonight), explained that New Scotland would be considered for either a community residence program, or an intermediate care facility program.

A community residence program provides 24-hour supervised living to its residents, when they are not in a day program — at the center, in a hospital, or at home, or in mainstream employment.

An intermediate care facility provides the same 24-hour care, but with the addition of clinical staff — psychiatrists, occupational and physical therapists, nurses, or whatever group the needs demand. According to Solomon, needs are a very important part of the formula. "Right now we are just saying to the town that we are interested in the area. We have to make sure that we have access to transportation and employment opportunities for our residents. We have 130 municipalities in our six-county region, so while we are interested in New Scotland, it's not the only municipality we are interested in.

Solomon also made it clear that the range of abilities of the center's clients were "just as diverse as the range of abilities in any group or family. Their needs are as high as people who are normal." He also addressed the property value question, "We can say that there are hundreds of studies throughout the country that bear out that community residences have no effect on a property's exchange in the marketplace. I would be more than happy to share any of this information with anyone. They can contact our office during business hours (at 570-7429 for additional information."

Reilly said he felt that the committee's first meeting was "a very good one. We learned that there are 876 people in six areas who are residents. We should do our part if we are called upon," Reilly said.

"After all, it could be my child we help. Or yours."

Voorheesville girls in the thick of it

By Matt Bladun

Infectious Medical Waste transportation, regulatory and environmental aspects, based support in hygiene, safety, engineering, and efficiently with the right tools at the right time.

Voorheesville needed a victory after suffering a tough loss to the hands of Cohoes the week before. Fortunately, the "Cohoes Shockers" did not seem to affect them as they jumped out to a 21-4 first quarter lead, and they never looked back. The Red Raiders were unable to pull any closer than 10 points throughout the game, until there were about three minutes left in the game when they cut the lead to seven. But the Birds aggressive play in the closing minutes was enough to hold on for another win.

Kaplan steals the show as Lady Eagles down Nisky

By Justin Cresswell

On the surface, it was the "Anita Kaplan Show" for the Bethlehem girls varsity basketball team in their matchup with Niskayuna on Saturday.

The sophomore center poured in a season-high 29 points and snared a game-high 14 rebounds to help her team secure a tie for the Suburban Council's Gold Division title with a 59-47 victory over Niskayuna. The win was BC's 10th in a row, improving their record to 10-1 in the league and 14-1 overall. One more win will give the Eagles the outright division title. They will have the opportunity to clinch either against Shaker on Wednesday, or versus Scotia on Saturday. Both games are at home.

Kaplan's output of 29 was eight more than the 21 BC scored as a team in an early season to Niskayuna, the Eagles lone defeat.

Although Kaplan's figures show what appears to be a losing team effort in the win, it was the exceptionally steady play of guards Amy Koesi (10 assists), Leslie Anderson, and Karyn Mendel that proved indispensable to the Eagles. The three showed their worth in breaking Niskayuna's tough full-court man-to-man pressure. Once broken, the trap left Niskayuna spread out. Bethlehem took advantage of this and connected on 56 percent of their field goal attempts.

Even though Niskayuna never held the lead, they played hard throughout the entire contest. At the beginning of the game, they got as close as 43-39, but the visiting Eagles hit 73 percent (8-11) of their shots that quarter and returned to turn back Niskayuna. BC Coach Bill Warner said his team's conditioning enabled them to rise to the occasion late in the game.

RCS spikers still unbeaten

By Josh Curley

After rocking Cohoes in a league game last Wednesday, the RCS girls volleyball team played their best ball at a Flattsburgh Tournament Saturday.

Ravena defeated Cohoes 15-4, 15-10 to run their Cohoes record to 13-0. The Indians relied almost exclusively on their non-starters, who handled the situation with obvious ease. RCS was led offensively by Melissa Skipper, Hope Ackert, Krissy Gottsman and Erika Wartna, as well as Leslie Anderson, and Karyn Mendel that proved indispensable to the Eagles. The three showed their worth in breaking Niskayuna's tough full-court man-to-man pressure. Once broken, the trap left Niskayuna spread out. Correction

A photo caption in last week's Bethlehem girls varsity basketball game incorrectly stated that Anita Kaplan had scored her 1,000th career point. Kaplan was correctly identified in the photo but it was Julie Francis who had scored her 1,000th career point during the game as was stated in the corresponding story.
Birds extend streak to 5

By Kevin Taylor

The Voorheesville wrestling team is finally peaking, but it may be too late. The Blackbirds strung together three more victories last week to extend their season-long winning streak to five matches in a row.

On Tuesday, the Blackbirds traveled to Mechanicville for a league match-up. The Birds dominated early and never looked back en route to a 39-21 victory over the Red Raiders. The Blackbirds then went on to extend their only three matches in the contest. Winners for the Birds and their weight class were Josh Vink (132) and Chad Hotaling (215) with pins and Chris Dell’Acqua (126) with a decision victory.

Thursday’s non-league match against Duanesburg produced some great heroics for the Blackbirds. The Birds came out smoking in the beginning with Vink getting a pin in 22 seconds to start the ball rolling for the Blackbirds. Following in Vink’s steps the next two wrestlers both pinned their man with ease to increase the Blackbird lead. After a loss by Reech, Ravida and Leach both picked up forfeits to secure the lead. Then, at 167, came the most exciting dual in the match. Blackbird Paul Novak looked to be on his way to defeat with 20 seconds left in the match, when he scored four quick points to pull out at 5-4. Former Blackbird Mike Talavera then picked up a forfeit at 215 to round out the Blackbirds scoring. The final score was 39-24.

In their last home meet this season, Bethlehem hosted Guilderland and Scotia for BC’s best showing yet with a mark high for this year of 96.2 total team score. In the end, BC lost to Guilderland but beat Scotia.

Tomboys open registration

The Bethlehem Tomboys will hold registration for the 1989 season on Saturday, Feb. 11, from 10 a.m. to noon, at the Bethlehem Public Library, 415 Delaware Ave., Delmar.

The registration fee is $32. For information call 439-3682.

BC boys extend streak to 5

Wrestling

If Chad Hotaling pinned his man. Through two periods it didn’t seem Hotaling had what it would take to get the pin, but midway through the final period he came to life as he took advantage of a mistake by the Schenectady wrestler and put him on his back. Less than 10 seconds later he got the pin and the Blackbird bench erupted to congratulate their teammate. Hotaling’s pin gave the Blackbirds a 33-30 victory.

With these three victories the Birds are at the .500 mark for the year (7-7-1) and broke that mark in the league with the win at Mechanicville (4-3), which is good enough for third in the Colonial Council.

This week the Blackbirds travel to Schalmont (second place in the league) on Thursday for their final league match and then go to Mechanicville on Saturday for the Colonial Council Tournament, which the Blackbirds should fare well in.

Woman charged for drug possession

Bethlehem police arrested a 19-year-old Glenmont woman on misdemeanor unlawful possession of marijuana charges Saturday night.

Police said the woman was observed throwing several items out of her car near the Petro station on Rte. 5W. The items were recovered and found to be a small bag containing marijuana and a package of rolling papers, police said.

The Spotlight — February 1, 1989 — PAGE 23
By John Bellizzi III

BC's varsity wrestling team brought back their record up to .500 last week, improving to 4-4 overall. The Eagles are in the thick of the hunt for the Section II Dual Meet Championship and will be favored in their next dual against Shenendehowa.

Tonight, Shenendehowa will face the Eagles at BCHS, marking the final dual meet of the 1988-89 season. This evening's dual is not only an opportunity for the Eagles to finish the year with a winning record but also the best shot Bethlehem Central has at defeating the Flamingos in recent years. After the dual meet campaign is over, Bethlehem's varsity grapplers will be challenged by post-season tournament competition, including the annual Section II Dual Meet on February 17th, and competitive experiences on the mat.

Tonight's dual will test to Bethlehem's varsity 50-27 that same evening. The Tartans won the 91-pound match when starter Tom Shae took the lead as sophomore Marc Bauman pinned his opponent in second period. Jeremy Hartnett wrestled another key match at 112, with Scotia standout Mike DiCaprio 2:2 Brown. Won by a technical fall, and Pat and Mike Miller's 3-0 win for his match by default, and the Tartans forfeited 155, 167 and 177 to BC.

Several Eagle junior varsity matmen performed admirably at the first annual Bethlehem Classic held at BCHS last Saturday. First-year wrestler Nick Fiske won the 111-pound championship. After both the regular and three-over matches ended in a tie in the 136-pound finals, Darrin Fiske was defeated by Watervliet's Dave Myz, taking second place. Among BCs other place winners were Kevin Sciuone, Kevin Freeman, Mike Roney, Eric Newdom, Mike Genovese, and Scott Stefanik, who all placed third. The JV Eagles are 8-1 (11-0 overall) going into the dual meeting against Shenehendehowa. This Saturday, Bethlehem will finish the season with the highly competitive Amsterdam Tournament, billed by many as the unofficial state championship at the junior varsity level.

Last Friday, the BCHS freshman wrestling team continued their dominant season with a victory over Ravena, in which the Eagles won all but one bout. The fresh Eagles wind up their season this week.

Moser optimistic for Shaker rematch

By Bill Dixon

Last Friday's close and disappointing 56-55 loss to Niskayuna evened the Bethlehem boys basketball team's record at five wins and five losses in its last 10 games, a promising tally that has BC coach Black Moser as optimistic as ever.

"We're now playing teams closer that earlier in the season just by not making mistakes. We've improved," said Moser.

The first time Bethlehem met Nisky this season, the Eagles lost by 20 points and left the court sorely defeated after being shown up in a home game.

But last week's rematch saw a more competitive game from the orange and black, as they tightened their defense significantly and played the home team very close. The lead change hands rapidly throughout the first half, while the second quarter was slightly more in Bethlehem's favor. At the half, BC led 29-25. The third quarter, however, Niskayuna railed to narrow the lead to just two points, a slight lead the Eagles held until midway through the fourth quarter.

It was then that the lead started to seeaw between the two teams even more quickly than before. Things turned in favor of the Bee, McDermott's offensive efforts strong, each had a long shot that was blocked. The defensive barriers that served to keep the game's point total fairly low.

Later in the game, Nisky had slipped ahead by three points to end the game 48-45.

"I was a little disappointed, but mostly I was pleased with our effort. We just missed some key shots and they didn't. I could have never given it up, it was really anybody's game," said Moser, who added that although the Eagles had plenty of opportunities to win, it was extremely well, there were outstanding performances from Schalmont's Michael Kast and Shenendehowa, both of whom have been proven contributors to the Eagle's comeback.

Tuesday Bethlehem will face Shaker, a team which Moser notes as having improved considerably since they first defeated BC earlier in the season. Of particular concern might be the team's star forward, Pat Anderson. The threat, however, seems to hold little terror for Moser. "We just keep working and play the game the way we want to play it and not worry about them. If we do that I think we can win," said Moser.

Friday BC will take on Scotia, a team with a poor record but with a potential that shouldn't be underestimated, as they drove the Eagles into double overtime earlier in the season.

RCS bounds against Lansingburgh

By Curt VanDercen

Last week there seemed to be two different Ravena teams on the floor. The first was the winning four and five team, improving Lansingburgh team.

With Chuck Snyder hitting from the outside and with build-up in the center by newcomer Jerome Moore grabbing rebounds at both ends of the court, the Knights outscored Ravena 21-9 in the second quarter to tighten their grip on the game. Lansingburgh then held on for a 54-50 win, despite the fact that Ravena's Jim Rensford hit five of seven three pointers in a desperate comeback attempt. Rensford led the Indians with 21 points and three assists in their 1-0 loss to the Knights.

"Going into Friday's game the Indians were without Jason Weadle and Tony Gay and appeared to be in over their heads. Instead they came out and played some of the best basketball they have ever played all year. Using a hustling, tenacious defense and a balanced offense, if somewhat inconsistent offense, the Indians trailed 12-1 at the end of the first quarter. But in the second quarter, Rensford took over and held a commanding 28-17 lead. Tony Gay and Andre Cook three-pointer at the buzzer. Instead of dying, like most teams in basketball, coaches planted them to do, the Indians came back behind Nicewonger and Tony Johnston, who scored all seven of his points in the third quarter. Ravena outscored Vests 17-7 in the third quarter to narrow the gap to 35-34. The game went back and forth in the fourth quarter, Nicewonger hit three from three for a good 129 to go on a three-point play by Tony Fruico. Nicewonger hit three more shots to give Ravena a total of 13 percent overall the whole game.

This week the Indians will play their last two home games of the year as they take on win or lose teams to the top three teams in the league. On Tuesday Waterford comes to town and on Friday they will host Schalmont. Coach Cook will have his squad ready, but will still have a losing season and to build some momentum for the sections.
