Timing:

Direct sow in winter or early spring. The colder, the better.

Once seedlings emerge, thin to 12-18" apart. Or, start indoors in early spring by pressing the seeds into the soil, but do not cover them. Keep in a cool place. Transplant when small without disturbing the roots. Once flowering, water infrequently. To save seeds for planting or eating, let flowers produce seed heads and allow to dry on the plant. Harvest when the seeds rattle within.
